masses. It is they who pull the wires which control the public mind” ~ Edward L. Bernays

Junious Ricardo Stanton is producer and host of The Digital Underground and The Cyberspace Sanctuary – A Safe House for the Mind. A writer and community broadcaster for 20 years, Junious blogs at From the Ramparts.

Frequent requests over the years have come from subscribers to discuss the father of modern propaganda Edward Bernays. When I discovered that Junious was blogging on Bernays and his techniques, I asked him to join me on the Solari Report to connect the dots between Bernays, the propaganda industry Bernays helped create and the lies we live with today. Many people struggle to understand reality because the lies used to construct our official reality are so BIG. When you understand the history of manufacturing big lies and the powerful technology available to help construct false realities, the modern era starts to make more sense.

In Let’s Go to the Movies, I will comment on Unacknowledged – a new documentary about the black budget, black technology and the black world that underscores how thick the lies have become.

In Money & Markets this week I will discuss the latest in financial and geopolitical news.

Send your questions for Ask Catherine or post in the comment section.

From the transcript:

A new President and his administration now grapple with how the United States, its economy and its role in the world will evolve from the Bretton Woods system created at the end of WWII and our uni-polar vision of the world. Will the United States successfully adapt to a more globalized, multi-polar world order? This critical discussion, begun in a rancorous campaign, is shrouded by partisan politics and a media “shriek-o-meter” that is distracting at best and dishonest at worst. At the heart of this problem lie the deep contradictions within the US economy that result from an economic addiction to debt, crime, and war.

Highlights from Last Week - Interest Rate Swaps with Rob Kirby
This week on the Solari Report, Rob Kirby of Kirby Analytics joins me to discuss the role of interest rate swaps in pushing interest rates down and debasing financial markets, the allocation of our money and labor and our society. This exchange will follow up on our discussion of the role of the US Exchange Stabilization Fund in market intervention and covert financial flows.

Rob is a unique figure in the financial world. He traded derivatives with several large financial institutions. Since founding Kirby Analytics, Rob has consistently educated the independent media about the role of derivatives in centralizing political control and draining personal financial wealth. This financial topic is complex and sophisticated, and Rob makes it accessible to all of us.
