Christopher Mann is a man for all seasons.

Born in London to parents who were anthroposophists – followers of Rudolf Steiner’s philosophy – Chris studied and worked in England and Switzerland. In 1980, he and his Swiss wife Martina moved to the United States. They bought farmland in East Troy, Wisconsin and created the Michael Fields Agricultural Institute to promote research and education to support biodynamic farming in the United States.

Chris and Martina dedicated their life and personal resources to make sure that biodynamic farming would not be buried by the corruption of our soil, seed and food supply and consolidation of ownership and control of farmland. Their efforts represent a quiet, extraordinary contribution during a period in which private investors and corporate agriculture continued to centralize control of our food supply.

Harry Blazer visited Michael Fields last year to conduct interviews with two people that we published in 2016 – former executive director Dave Andrews about the future of biodynamic and organic farming and Angela L. Curtes, the head of Grounded LLC and former farm staff, about healthy soil. Harry also took time to do an extensive series of interviews with Chris about his life and work.

These rich discussions capture the powerful wisdom and insight that Chris has gained from his extraordinary contribution to our food systems and society. It captures the legacy of a legend among us.
In Money & Markets this week I will discuss the latest in financial and geopolitical news.

In Let’s Go to the Movies, I will review Dunkirk, Christopher Nolan’s new blockbuster film about the British people sailing across the English Channel to save the British army from annihilation when the British command alone could not get the job done in time.

From the transcript:

Twenty years ago, I made a decision. I had to choose between my wealth and social position and my core principles. I had to decide which was more important to me – to remain a member of the establishment or to refuse to be a party to genocide; to choose individual sovereignty or high-paid slavery. I think of that decision often these days as I watch the American people individually and collectively approach a similar decision point.

I made my choice early. Now, everyone who has not made that choice will be forced to make it. The middle of the road is disappearing. Each of us will have to choose and, hopefully, defend our individual sovereignty and the sovereignty and rights of those around us. The alternative is to watch our federal government and our military engage in an acceleration of global war and profiteering. The private companies and investors who currently exercise control over our government are using it to operate violently and above the law. Global surveillance and the ability to murder with impunity is the real source of inequality. Our risks of high-tech slavery, poverty, or death are rising as state and local governments write down pension funds and write off essential services such as functioning water and sewer systems.

Life & Death Issues vs. Monuments

By Catherine Austin Fitts

I received the following question from a reader:

QUESTION: Thank you for addressing so many truly important issues. As to the issue of Confederate monuments, since neither you nor I live in African-American skin with all the pain and prejudice to which people of color are subjected, it seems to me we ought to try and see the Confederate monuments as the intimidating symbols established by white supremacists in the early 1900s as people of color see them. Unless we do, we fail to see these monuments clearly. I hope you will consider that.

Here’s my answer:

ANSWER: I grew up in an mixed neighborhood in Philadelphia. I was raised, in part, by an African American woman and have lived off and on in African American neighborhoods. I have both belonged to and attended African American churches. I partnered with a team of African-American entrepreneurs in the 1990’s to prototype venture equity funds for small business and communities. As Federal Housing Commissioner I ran an operation that was a primary source of mortgage credit to African American communities. Later, my company served as financial advisor to the same institution. In litigation with the federal government I experienced many of the tactics used to target African Americans and their communities.

I do not pretend to understand what it is like to walk around in African American skin. However, I have spent a great deal of my life in the company of a wide variety of accomplished and intelligent people who do.

DOD and HUD Missing Money: Supporting Documentation

Update from CAF: Dr. Skidmore and his team have now reviewed additional documentations for the Army, Air Force and updates for the DOD general fund, adding $2.6 trillion of undocumentable adjustments. The table below is updated to include these staggering amounts.

By Catherine Austin Fitts

Thanks to Dr. Mark Skidmore and his graduate students we are publishing a list of the supporting documentation for undocumentable adjustments identified at DOD and HUD from fiscal 1998-2015.

Dr. Skidmore is the Director of the North Central Regional Center for Rural Development at Michigan State University and Professor and Morris Chair in State and Local Gov't Finance and Policy.

Our gratitude for his efforts to understand and document this phenomenon is “off the charts”! We will be adding additional files and information as they find them.
