Abacus: Winning Through the Power of the Law with Dave Lindorff - May 24th

To Solari Readers

Abacus, you know, is the Chinese calculator. China regards abacus as a national treasure. So we say we’ll name the bank Abacus.” ~Thomas Sung, Founder of Abacus Federal Savings Bank

After the United States spent trillions on bank bailouts, guess what bank was prosecuted? One of the smallest banks in the country. It did not do subprime mortgage loans. It had an unusually low default rate on its mortgage portfolios. Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac made money on the mortgage portfolios it originated.

As Abacus Federal Savings Bank was cleared of all allegations by the facts and a New York City jury, the story was told by investigative reporter Dave Lindorff and a subsequent award winning documentary. This is an extraordinary tale of the power of the rule of law in the hands of Abacus founder Thomas Sung and his three brilliant, hardworking daughters.

Dave Lindorff joins me this week on the Solari Report to tell you this story. You will be inspired by what can happen when great investigative reporting supports courageous small business men and women in the face of yet another malicious prosecution funded with taxpayers money. Are these prosecutors legitimate? Or are they the “Sheriff of Nottingham,” pushing profits out of community banks and into Wall Street banks, pumping up their stocks? Is enforcement in America determined by political contributions and lobbyists or by the rule of law?

You decide by choosing with whom you bank.

In Let’s Go to the Movies I will comment on the award winning documentary on the Sung’s story “Abacus: Small Enough to Jail”. Check out our review in Food for the Soul.

Highlights from Last Week - Under an Ionized Sky with Harry Blazer & Elana Freeland

This week on The Solari Report, Harry Blazer speaks to Elana Freeland about her new book Under an Ionized Sky: From Chemtrails to Space Fence Lockdown. Under an Ionized Sky received a Solari Gold Star and Solari listed it in Best Books for 2018.

In Under an Ionized Sky, Freeland connects the dots between the satellite infrastructure of the national-security state, the cell towers and networks of the telecommunications companies, HAARP, and the engineering of nanoparticles sprayed in chemical cocktails above our heads. What does this have to do with weather and natural disaster warfare? What does this have to do with mind control? What does this have to do with the EMF radiation that is making so many people sick? The answer is a quite lot.

Elana Freeland and Harry Blazer help you make integrated sense of so many things happening since we built out a global satellite infrastructure.
