Erik Satie – Once Upon A Time In Paris
I return to the United States tomorrow. After six weeks in the Netherlands, Germany, Italy and Switzerland, I am so looking forward to my discussion of the latest geopolitical developments with the Saker. Topics on our list for our 4th Quarter interview are:

- Russian Pension Fund Reform – Impact on Putin’s Approval Rating
- The Empire Splits the Orthodox Church
- President Trump’s Threat to Withdraw from the INF
- The Russian Economy: The Impact of Sanctions and Trade Wars
- Middle East: Syria & Genocide in Gaza
- US Elections – What Comes Next?

Make sure to post your questions for the Saker here before Tuesday morning. Check out his latest on “Senior Russian Diplomat Confirms Russia is Preparing for War” and “The Empire Splits the Orthodox World.”

In Let’s Go to the Movies! I will revisit one of my favorites As It Is In Heaven. This Swedish film offers delightful insights about music and inspiration in changing times. Too many subscribers tell me they have not seen it, so I bring it up again!

Just A Taste
Food for the Soul: The Oscar Race Has Started

“I won’t be a rock star. I will be a legend.” ~Freddie Mercury – front man of Queen

By Your Culture Scout

Every autumn, various big, showpiece movies that start popping up in cinemas with attendant publicity blitz do not have anything in common other than the fact that they have been groomed for a Fall debut as Oscar-hopefuls. They usually get premiered at one of the fall festivals, often Venice or Toronto (or both) and subsequently they open in the US, marking the start of the Oscar race.

The first few possible contenders are out so let’s take a look at them.

Every generation seems to have its own version of A Star is Born. The original was invented by a group of classic Hollywood screenwriters in the days where solid storytelling was a base of any good movie because neither low-tech special effects nor theatrical-style of acting would be enough. These days a lot of CGI and global marketing can make even a mediocre story into a major artistic success but in the golden years of old Hollywood you had to start with a good script. The story has been brought to screen four times: the 1937 original starred Janet Gaynor and Fredric March in their Technicolor debut, the 1954 edition starred James Mason and Judy Garland and it has been considered a classic, the 1975 edition shifted the story from the world of movie stardom to the music scene starring the biggest performers of the era: Barbra Streisand and Kris Kristofferson. This year’s version stays in the music setting but, luckily, is a much improved attempt at telling the same tale of two performers at opposite trajectories of stardom.

From the transcript:

The rise of the Asian consumer is not just about the number of shoppers, but also about where financial and economic wealth will grow and how that wealth will translate into geopolitical power. It’s about the people that corporations and politicians care about most and serve. It’s also about managing our political and monetary risks—such as covert wars and inflation—as governments and central banks compete for natural resources and capital.

Highlights from Last Week - Food Series: Your Dentist and Your Health with Dr. Andrew Kilgore

There is no aspect of food left unexplored by Harry Blazer. So it was only a matter of time until he pulled an outstanding dentist into his orbit for a new episode of the Food Series.

This coming week on the Solari Report, Dr. Andrew Killgore will join Harry for a discussion of dental health. This fascinating discussion will inspire you to improve your dental health and enjoy a stronger relationship with your dentist.

Dr. Killgore received his Bachelor of Arts in Philosophy from Vanderbilt University in Nashville, TN. Prior to entering the University of Louisville School of Dentistry, Dr. Killgore served as an Outward Bound mountaineering instructor in Montana and then worked in dental equipment sales. Dr. Killgore is a member of the Academy of General Dentistry, the American Dental Association, the Ohio Dental Association, the American Academy of Implant Dentistry, and the American Academy of Cosmetic Dentistry. Dr. Killgore’s passions include dental mission work. He has been a leader of mission teams to the Dominican Republic, Jamaica, Mexico and Uganda and provides free dental care to the needy from his practice in Cincinnati.
