interviews Bill Niman in the third part of a fascinating three-part series with two of the most knowledgeable leaders in fresh food markets in America today. The first two parts of this series were Hog Heaven and the Godfather of Grass-Fed. As millions of people in the United States and Canada this week sit down to enjoy Thanksgiving dinner, it is appropriate that this episode will cover poultry.

No one knows more about raising the finest livestock than Bill and his team. Bill’s wife Nicolette is author of Righteous Porkchop: Finding a Life and Good Food Beyond Factory Farms and Defending Beef: the Case for Sustainable Beef Production. Together they own and operate Bill and Nicolette Niman’s Farm in Bolinas, California, raising and producing the finest lamb, beef, and turkey.

Bill is our hero this week on the Solari Report. The courage and persistence he has shown in his commitment to protecting our food supply and providing the finest meat available has been extraordinary. While giving thanks during this season, please give thanks for Bill and Nicolette and the farmers and ranchers like them who provide us with healthy, nutritious food. Who’s your farmer? Who’s your rancher? If possible, source your food from people you know and trust and remember to tell them, THANKS!

In Let’s Go to the Movies! I recommend a movie called The Blind Side that includes one of my favorite Thanksgiving dinner movie scenes. Based on a true story from Memphis, Tennessee, the journey of the Tuohy family describes many of the blessings that come from the values we treasure in this area of the world – love of God, family, home, education and community.

The 2nd Quarter Wrap Up Transcript is now fully available for all Solari Report subscribers!

From the transcript:

The rise of the Asian consumer is not just about the number of shoppers, but also about where financial and economic wealth will grow and how that wealth will translate into geopolitical power. It’s about the people that corporations and politicians care about most and serve. It’s also about managing our political and monetary risks—such as covert wars and inflation—as governments and central banks compete for natural resources and capital.

Highlights from Last Week - 3rd Quarter Wrap Up 2018: Megacities and the Growth of Global Real Estate Companies

This week is the final segment of our 3rd Quarter 2018 Wrap Up. On Thursday, I will discuss our theme – “Megacities and the Growth of Global Real Estate Companies.”

The megacities trend has profound implications both for culture and for markets. This trend includes the flow of capital into real estate and the intersection of global equity markets with global real estate development, ownership and management.

Between 1800 and 2000, the global population percentage living in cities grew from 3 to 47. That percentage is likely to continue to rise for some time to come.

The increase in planetary urban density is tied to the growth of the Asian economies and the rise of the Asian middle class. Of 47 current megacities (with populations of 10 million people or more), 30 are in Asia, including 15 in China and six in India.

Our 3rd Quarter 2018 Wrap Up comes with a web presentation and transcripts. This includes our tables of megacities and global real estate companies for your review. Our goal is to ensure you understand the growth of megacities as an important primary trend — with consequences for culture, geopolitics and investment for decades to come.
