Transhumanism 101 with Dr. Joseph Farrell

Summary: History is replete with stories about the quest for the Fountain of Youth or the Elixir of Life. Many are tempted by the possibilities of physical immortality or a stronger mind for themselves or their children. Now, enhancing the human condition with sophisticated technologies is the goal of many large corporations and banks.

Solari has received a lot of questions from new subscribers about transhumanism. It's time to go back to the beginning and discuss what transhumanism is, how we got to where we are today, and what it means for our future. Join me for a conversation with Dr. Joseph P. Farrell on this most important topic.

If you are new to this discussion, you may want to read some background information before listening or reading the interview.

Bio:

Born and raised in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, Joseph P. Farrell has a doctorate in patristics from the University of Oxford, and pursues research in physics, alternative history and science, and "strange stuff". His book The Giza DeathStar was published in the spring of 2002, and was his first venture into "alternative history and science". Following a paradigm of researching the relationship between alternative history and science, Farrell has followed with a stunning series of books, each conceived to stand alone, but each also conceived in a pre-arranged sequence:

Catherine Austin Fitts: Ladies and gentlemen, welcome to The Solari Report. Today I have a special treat. I thought I had to wait until the end of the month to talk to Dr. Farrell, but I get to talk to him now.

We received many questions on transhumanism and what transhumanism is, and people are ready to explore this topic and understand it because it's coming at us almost like a tsunami. There is no one I trust more to introduce this topic than Dr. Farrell. He wrote an excellent book in 2012 with his coauthor, Scott de Hart. That is still available. There is much about transhumanism in both the book and his wonderful website, Giza Death Star, as well as in the members' group of Giza Death Star. I can't recommend it to you highly enough.

With that, Joseph Farrell, welcome to The Solari Report.

Dr. Joseph Farrell: Thanks for having me back with you.

Fitts: I love your hat!

Farrell: This is my Have Gun – Will Travel hat. Do you remember that old television series?

Fitts: Yes, I do.

Farrell: I saw this online, and I buy myself a hat every Christmas. This was my Christmas gift to me this year. It's my Have Gun – Will Travel hat.

Fitts: You have an image problem. Your image problem comes from many years of you saying that you are a 'hick' from South Dakota, but now South Dakota has become the most fashionable state in the country.

Farrell: It's weird. I looked up the census for my hometown of Sioux Falls, and it's now approaching 190,000 people.

Fitts: It's the size of Iceland!

Farrell: I think, "Sioux Falls? What's going on up there?" It's becoming quite a hip place. In a certain sense, it makes me wish that I'd moved back there.

Fitts: It's quite cold in the winter.

Farrell: Yes, it is.

Fitts: Transhumanism 101; what is transhumanism?

Farrell: I think that people have to latch onto one basic philosophical concept: Transhumanism is based on a philosophy of materialism. That is to say there is no transcendent God, and there is no transcendent morality which means that humanity reduces to a collection of chemical reactions, and it can be improved.

In other words, there is no sense of humanity having been created in a state of divine grace or in the image of God or anything like this; it's just another mechanism for scientists to play with.

Fitts: I would also say that it assumes our physical body is merely the thing that you can see in the third dimension as opposed to the electromagnetic field or the soul or the spirit. I would describe it as saying that 50% of our body is not on the table for transhumanism; it doesn't exist.

Farrell: That is precisely it. Any spiritual or moral component is excluded ab initio. It's just another resource for scientists to experiment on. The other key thing in transhumanism is when you read the works of its promoters, like Ray Kurzweil—and we'll get to him because Ray Kurzweil, of course, is one of the technical advisors to Google – you have transhumanists who are heading up entire departments in Google. This is very much, in their thinking, part of the information revolution.

The other component of their philosophy is, of course, evolution. They believe that evolutionary processes not only are fundamental in their materialist worldview, but they also believe that you can tinker with evolution; you can help it along, so to speak, and perfect humanity.

In other words, the other part of transhumanism to understand is if you go back to the Soviet Union Stalin era, or if you go to Nazi Germany trying to create new Soviet man or improve the genetic stock with their Lebensborn Program and create a new man; much of this thinking of transhumanism is very similar to that kind of thinking. They believe that they are involved in a project to improve humanity.

Well, none of the improvements they are suggesting are ones that I am at all enamored with.

Fitts: When you read them, and I'm going to grossly oversimplify the two threads: One is, "We can enhance our abilities and make ourselves better, and won't this be wonderful?" The other is, "Oh great! We can build a demonic society and engineer all of these children to adopt occult demonic practices, and we can introduce all sorts of genetic technology coercively, and we can use this to control everybody."

Farrell: Let's look at what the transhumanists emphasize since they are materialists from the 'get-go'. They emphasize four technologies that they want to integrate humanity with—please note the word 'integrate': There is a very simple acronym that you can use to remember these technologies. It's GRIN (Genetics, Robotics, Information technologies, Nanotechnology).

That is to say transhumanists like Ray Kurzweil believe that you can enhance humanity by integrating humanity with those four technologies. They've even come up with a new term for transhumanism in Canada because they have discovered that people are waking up to this transhumanist agenda. So now the Canadian government is no longer calling it 'transhumanism'; they are calling it 'bio-digital convergence'.

Fitts: The eviler it is, the faster it multiplies—'pretzel talk'.

Farrell: Absolutely. That is also a part of this. You are dealing with a gnostic agenda and a gnostic culture where you are manipulating language to get people onboard with their agenda.

I'll use Ray Kurzweil as an example because he is the one who somewhat wrote the textbook for transhumanism. It's a book called The Singularity.

Fitts: One of my subscribers made me read it, and I finished it at the Pittsburgh airport. It was one of the most depressing books. My plane was late, so I sat there eating horrible GMO burgers reading The Singularity. It was a despicable experience.

Farrell: It's a book that Kurzweil is advocating that you can enhance humanity by playing with the human genome and enhancing certain qualities to make people smarter and weeding out all the spiritual issues – the God gene and all of that – and integrating machines and robotics with human beings.

Elon Musk has his Neuralink, and some of these transhumanists have actually gone so far as to integrate machines. It's a little like the Borg in Star Trek.

Fitts: You're linking up to AI, and the AI will make you much smarter.

Farrell: Transhumanists are even talking about downloading and uploading your personality. In other words, these people are thinking way 'outside the box'.

The thing to take away from this is they are entirely serious about it.

Fitts: They conceptualize. You will see presentations where they say that the body or the brain is just like a machine. This shows that they either know nothing about machines, or nothing about humans, or nothing about both. It's astonishing.

Farrell: This is the other thing that is so disturbing. This is coming out of their material as 'philosophy'. The brain, for them, is the mind. For me, the brain and the mind are two different things. For the transhumanists, they genuinely believe, "We can inject you with nanotechnology. We can integrate you with a cyber-robotic arm or telescopic vision or infrared rays," and all of this 'nutty stuff'. They are entirely serious about this.

It's very important for people to understand that much of this transhumanist philosophy has seeped into America's black projects world. I'm thinking particularly of the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA). I like to call it the 'Diabolically Apocalyptic Research Projects Agency'. DARPA is involved in a lot of this transhumanist research.

I'll give you one example, and this is typical transhumanist thinking: DARPA has been investigating dolphins to figure out why the dolphins have a brain that allows them to sleep with one half of their brain while the other half is awake.

Technically, while the dolphins never sleep, they are sleeping; it's just that one half of their brain is sleeping. So, they want to integrate this with humanity so that they can create super-soldiers who require much less sleep. How they are going to do this I don't know, but I suspect they will think of some way to isolate whatever is genetically in dolphins to do this and then start injecting people. This is literally how they think.

Fitts: I don't know if you've seen this, but there is a real push to market the idea of growing your baby in an incubator. You have an incubator in your living room, and the baby grows in the incubator so that you're not inconvenienced, and you can keep working. They can't fathom that the baby would lose anything as a result of this.

Someone is building a love machine so that you can get in the machine and feel loved because you will grow up not touching people and completely isolated.

Farrell: You cannot tell me that is not going to have some very deleterious long-term effects. Look at what we've seen already with children forced to wear masks during these ridiculous mask lockdowns. We have suicides of children and teenagers that are off the charts.

Fitts: If you look at the instructions for the MK-Ultra (CIA mind control project) children, the instructions were that the parents weren't allowed to touch them and they would be isolated. All of the instructions are what they are doing to everybody now. It's like a massive MK-Ultra program. It's quite remarkable.

Farrell: It's all coming out of this transhumanist agenda. If humanity is nothing more than a collection of chemical reactions, and if your thoughts and emotions are nothing more than a collection of chemical reactions, then the door is wide open to all sorts of experimentation. This is exactly what we see them advocate.

One of the crucial areas of this whole grim approach that the transhumanists have to how they want to ‘enhance humanity’ is nanotechnology – literally, the idea of injecting you with small machines. This began back in the 1980’s.

Fitts: Not just injecting you with them, but sticking them up your nose.

Farrell: Sticking them up your nose, spraying you with them from overhead, putting them in your food, and all this began with a book in the early 1990’s by a K. Eric Drexler, Engines of Creation, all about nanotechnology. This was something that he advocated. You would have nanotechnology that would repair your cells instantly in the body and so on. It could literally go in at a microscopic level, tinker cell by cell with your genetic makeup, etc.

So, before we began the discussion, when we were talking about how the transhumanists are waging a hostile takeover of your body, that is exactly what is happening.

Fitts: They realized that they can use nanotechnology and cellular and digital technology to tender for the global population one by one, and load them up with a system that does ID surveillance, mind control, financial transactions, uploading an operating system, and they can tender and control everybody.

Farrell: It is an operating system. This is the goal of these four areas of technology they want to ‘enhance’ people with. This type of thinking is spelled out in Kurzweil’s book, The Singularity, in great detail. He is currently employed by Google.

In other words, this whole mechanism of social media and so on is ultimately designed in their thinking to tender for every individual on the planet using these technologies to trap them. That is the key.

Fitts: It’s not freedom. This is not me deciding that I want to be better and choosing how I am going to enhance myself in getting better; this is a group of people saying, “I am going to coercively – and without informed consent – inject this into your bodies, and I will take you over, and I am going to mind control and own you. So, I am going to use transhumanism to reintroduce slavery.”

Farrell: That is exactly what they are doing. It's a form of slavery where your body is being recruited to inform on you. That is exactly what they are doing.

Fitts: One of our subscribers posted Amazon's decision to turn everything on and make it an open network with their home gizmos. He pointed out that you could get a new Wi-Fi for $20 that could go through walls and get all sorts of invasive information about you and the breathing patterns about your neighbors, etc.

We are talking about the 24/7 Stasi surveillance (East German Ministry for State Security) all engineered by AI and software. I think we are there now already.

You and I both said that they are trying to install an operating system. Then I had to get criticized for that for a long time. You know how that feels? It's like saying that Q is hope porn; it's the same feeling.

Then it comes around, and the wonderful David O'Hagan published a series of articles where he dug into Moderna and all these other websites. There are the Moderna scientists describing, "We are installing an operating system into your body."

Farrell: Right, using these mRNA vaccines to do it.

Fitts: He described it as a 'plug and play' app. They are installing the operating system, and from now on, they can load in more and more apps.

Farrell: Let's look at the nanotechnology aspect of this. In my book, Microcosm and Medium, I talk about the neurophysiological research that began in the 1970's where the government was funding research to be able to read the brainwaves of people associated with particular words. That would be a step on the technology tree that would give them the ability to inject the template of those words remotely using radiowaves, microwaves, and so on.

I call this technology the 'electroencephalographic dictionary'. By the late 1970's, they had a dictionary of brainwaves built up for over 2,000 words. So, who knows where they are at now.

When you add nanotechnology to that, you are enhancing the receiver – in this case, the individual human – to be subjected to all of that manipulation. In other words, in my opinion, you are opening yourself up to a lot of mind manipulation that can take place. Ultimately, that is going to do immense psychological damage because you will be in a constant state of schizophrenia with all of these thoughts constantly bombarding you.

Fitts: There was a great author, Gloria Naylor, who was an unbelievably successful novelist, and she went to South Carolina in 1996 to write her next book. She became a target of the Department of Justice nonlethal technology prototyping. They were injecting ideas and thoughts into her head, and she could hear these thoughts that would come from nowhere. It went on and on. She was a brilliant woman, and she kept investigating. She finally figured out that she was up against a black budget op, and they were using her as a guinea pig. She couldn't figure out why because she was totally A-political.

I have some theories on why they picked her, but she went public and talked about it. You can read what this feels like. The targeted individuals have done a good job of documenting what it's like to have this experimented on you.

Farrell: I include her in my book, Microcosm and Medium. To add a little detail to her story, she discovered that when she would move to different places in her apartment, she was not subjected to this activity. That is a clear signal that you are dealing with that type of technology. You are creating a template of interferometer; you are mixing waves which interfere in a certain region. It's that interference pattern that is producing those interior conversations. When you move out of that region, you step out of that interference.

With the injection of nanotechnology, you are creating antennae or receivers that will pick this up no matter where you are, so you can never get away from it.

Fitts: Especially if it's delivered by satellite. So, it will become much harder to get away.

My impression is that the technology has gotten much more subtle. I'll wake up in the morning after having a dream that clearly has a political agenda. I think,

“That was not my dream. Where did that come from?”

I bet a million people in the same area had it last night. I think that the political campaigns absolutely use those.

Farrell: We have stories of the Cuban embassy attacks, and there are stories of people in Washington DC having these weird experiences and interior conversations. So, the technology is real. This is what people have to understand. I know it sounds like science fiction, but the technology and the patents are there if you look for them.

The thing that concerns me now is precisely the nanotechnology component of the GRIN technologies because it is so small that they can put it in anything, and you wouldn't know about it.

In other words, they are stepping wildly out of the idea of informed consent to any of this.

Fitts: They can put it as nanodust on products that you buy, and can put it in the food. We have a Food Series with a Purdue professor where he talks about the mystery ingredients that are now in food. We did one with Sally Fallon on synthetic food, which gets into that.

They can spray it over your head. I thought the real effort to get receivers into us came from the spray. I had a person from the CIA try to persuade me that it would coagulate in your body and would create organic bar chips. That is what the big machines at the airport were about; it was a feedback loop to calibrate the system.

Farrell: I can easily understand that. People have to latch onto that this is not science fiction. If you don't believe us, buy Ray Kurzweil's book, The Singularity, and read it. This is the future they had envisioned for people, and fundamentally, it's an anti-human feature.

They have no bounds. This will quickly be apparent if you read any of the transhumanists. They have no bounds in their thinking as to what they want to accomplish and how they want to get there.

Fitts: I'm going to get to how we shift this, but first I will dive a little deeper.

If you go to Solari.com, there is a commentary called 'Mind Control Tactics Used on Children and Young People (And Everyone Else)'. In it is a series of links. If you want to explore those links, there is a 'ton' of material. If you can only read one book, the book that they should read is yours (Dr. Farrells).

Farrell: The Transhumanism book.

Fitts: They should read Transhumanism, but they should also read Microcosm and Medium because that is the best book on mind control. It's not only on mind control as entrainment or subliminal programming; it's on the mind control in education, the mind control in culture, and all the different layers of mind control and how it's organized and orchestrated through the decades. You really can see it.

First of all, I think it's all coercion. Elon Musk invited you to download a Neuralink, but I believe that 99% of what is going on is coercive. But the big thing in the coercion is that they want to get control of the minds and bodies of the children.

They figure that you and I cannot be persuaded to 'join the band', but if they can reach the children – and this is why I was so 'crazy' about contact tracing – and get all the youths on Zoom and get them on phones and online, they are trying to assert complete control of the minds and bodies of those children without parents.

We saw Philadelphia issue a policy that they can vaccinate children 12 and over with only their consent without the parents' knowledge.

Farrell: San Francisco is also doing that. I don't know who is doing it on a statewide basis, but they are trying to do this. This is somewhat backfiring on them because, in response to the COVID shutdown, many parents were forced to watch their online classrooms or teach their children themselves. The parents who have been watching their online classes of what the teachers are actually teaching them have found out just how 'nuts' it is and are in rebellion.

We have all sorts of schoolboard revolutions taking place in this country where parents are homeschooling.

Fitts: Thank God!

Farrell: I agree with you. They are targeting the young people precisely because they know us older, more traditionally-minded people will die off eventually. It's a cold calculation on their part to do all of this and try to move society into their transhumanist realm.

Fitts: When you were a child, did you ever watch The Gummy Bears?

Farrell: No.

Fitts: There is a cartoon series called The Gummy Bears. We have a wonderful subscriber who watched it. In The Gummy Bears, you get the magic potion, and if you get the magic potion, then you are free to ride all the underground transportation systems, and you can travel all over the world.

You listen to the description of this, and it's just the way people are talking who want to take the COVID-19 injections. It's like, "I've had the magic potion, and now I'm free."

They don't understand that this so-called 'passport' they are going to get, that they will have to take another one every month until they die or whatever the treadmill is that they put you on because they have many things they want to load into the operating system.

I don't think that with two COVID-19 injections they will have it done, do you?

Farrell: No, I don't think they will have it done, and I think that it is beginning to backfire.

Before we started the discussion, I received an email from a friend-a former student-whose wife took the Pfizer vaccine/injection, and has had adverse reactions. She had leg swelling, stroke, and all of that. God bless her. It's horrid.

They are already talking about the updates that you need now for your injections because of new strains and so on. This has been an op from the 'get-go'. It's nothing more than that to get you injected with whatever is in those vaccines. Just reading the mRNA aspects of it alone should frighten anybody.

Fitts: If you want to understand what is happening, you should do a chart of the injection uptake in the United States versus the bank stocks. Just like how AOL goes up the more subscribers they have, or Netflix goes up the more subscribers they have, the bank stocks are going up the more they have the operating system loaded.

Farrell: It's an integrated system they are creating. As we've been telling people for a long time, they are trying to integrate this whole operating system with the social credit system and a cashless society. It's a beast system they are trying to put into place.

Fitts: The transhumanists are proceeding with something that is coercive. It's not building up a free human or making a free human enhanced; it is instead, a control agenda.

Part of transhumanism is life extension. The quote that we are using for the commentary is from Sean Parker. He is talking about how he is going to live until he's 160 because he's a billionaire. "If you think that wealth inequality is bad, wait until you see what happens when us billionaires can live for 160 years and you can't."

To what extent is this being driven by the fact that they intend to live to be 160 years, but they know that they can't afford for everybody to be able to live to be 160 years? They have to get control of us and shut us down before we get the joke that they are living to be 160 and we're not.

Farrell: I think that is a part of it, but let me flip the argument a bit. The way that it appears with this whole COVID plan/ 'scamdemic' to get everybody to take their vaccines, it seems that they do not want everybody to get vaccinated. The reason is that they need a control group for their global experiment.

Fitts: Do you think that is why so many people are discovering that they had saline solution and didn't get the injection?

We keep seeing those stories pop up all around the globe.

Farrell: I think that is exactly why; they are conducting a long-term experiment. People have to latch onto that, too. The transhumanists themselves over and over reiterate that this is a long-term experiment they are running, and they are trying to create a system of virtual immortality.

This is the bad news, and I really want people to 'latch' onto this because I warned about this whole thing way back in my first book, The Giza Death Star.

Fitts: When did you publish that?

Farrell: In 2001 or 2002. It's been a long time, but it's based on an observation from a church father by the name of St. John Chrysostom. His observation was that it was death itself that gives humanity the means and opportunity for repentance. If you have a virtually immortal human being; imagine for a moment a Mother Teresa being able to carry on her work for hundreds of years. By the same token, imagine an Adolf Hitler or a Joseph Stalin having hundreds of years to perfect their evil. That is what the transhumanists are attempting to make possible. Their philosophy is completely materialistic and therefore, amoral; there is no morality in it whatsoever.

Everything in it is coercive and without consent. So, they are bringing into existence an inhuman, antihuman world. We older models will be looked at by these people in precisely that way as older models that are obsolete.

Fitts: From what I can tell, this is the old Beck brothers problem from Yellowstone; the more they get away with things, the more they hate us. There is a real hatred that has developed. They assume that if they are getting away with it, then we are stupid. So, there is a cycle of disrespect.

I don't know if you are familiar with the Podesta art collection.

Farrell: Oh yes!

Fitts: The Podesta art collection has many connotations of human sacrifice and human physical abuse and pedophilia. It's very physically abusive of children and humans, and it is very gruesome. Yet, as you go around the world, you will see people who hang this art as though it's their signal that they are in the club.

You wonder what is going on in that club. I think that pedophilia is going on in that club. That is one of the reasons I am so worried about the contact tracing. They are getting a hold of the children and using mind control.

The other thing is I think that human sacrifice is going on in that club as well.

Farrell: I absolutely agree. The abortion industry in this country is the feedstock for those elements in these injections that are coming from human fetal tissue cells that have been harvested, etc. That, in my opinion, is playing to their agenda of a quest for a kind of virtual immortality. This is really what is behind this transhumanist idea.

Fitts: I can understand why stem cells are, but the way that they are recycling fetal tissue into people's bodies is almost like cannibalism.

Farrell: It is cannibalism. Some of the research they are trying to conduct is neurophysiological. We have already seen in warnings that doctors are raising about these mRNA vaccines a long-term potential for grievous neurological effects, very similar to Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease- the bovine spongiform encephalopathy of mad cow disease.

I've had people tell me they've noticed that people who have received these injections are acting strangely.

Fitts: I know some people who have had injections, and I see them regularly. Two of them are absolutely fine and completely unchanged, and one is a totally different person.

Farrell: I've heard similar stories from some of my friends as well.

My warning to people about this whole transhumanist agenda, particularly with these vaccines, is this: Would you get on an airplane that was rushed into commercial service due to some contrived emergency and fly that airplane that has had no proper certification, and then the company that produces the airplane is exempted from any legal liability for an adverse aeronautical event? Would you fly on that plane?

Fitts: Of course not.

Farrell: Most people wouldn't, but this is exactly what you are being asked to do to take these injections.

Fitts: Here is the thing: Would you fly on the plane if you didn't know where it was going?

Farrell: That also.

Fitts: These injections have ingredients, and we are not allowed to know what is in them. So where did the informed consent go?

Farrell: Out the window. As you pointed out, that is a violation of the Nuremberg Code.

Remember, we are talking about only the nanotechnology aspect of this; we're not even talking about their plans for genetic modification; we're not talking about their plans for robotic integration with human beings, and we're not even talking about the information tech. This is just one aspect of it.

Fitts: I think there are a couple of potential aspects. If you look at the signals that this is going to significantly lower or could significantly lower fertility rates, I almost wonder if once they understood the CRISPR technology, they didn't say, "From now on the only people who can come onto the planet and reincarnate on it are coming through genes that we control."

In other words, a man and woman can't get together and have a baby that nature and God decide what it is. The committee will determine what genes can come to Earth.

Farrell: I think that this is precisely what is behind this move to have incubator babies. They want total control over every human process – your thinking, your reproduction, your health, and your life. They want total control. This is the grizzly, deadly center at the heart of transhumanism. Read Ray Kurzweil. He doesn't come out and say that they want this total control, but when you add up everything that he's advocating, that is exactly what you end up with.

Fitts: One of the smartest economists I know, who has written about and covered the central banks, said that there is a treaty that governs whether GMOs can cross national boundaries or not. I'm wondering, if you have one of these injections, you become a GMO. Therefore, the reason they have to have the passports is that GMOs cannot cross borders without a notification and process of approval.

Farrell: Exactly. My other big worry is that these mRNA vaccines are patents. So, I wonder if this is also a sneaky way of establishing a legal lien on each person themselves.

Fitts: Or their offspring. In other words, if you have a child, we own the child.

Farrell: Or you have to have a child under these certain conditions, and then we might let you.

This is a hostile takeover. There is really no answer to these questions because, for one thing, you will notice that the legal and patent aspects of these mRNA injection vaccines have not been discussed in any major media or any alternative media. But the precedent will be established with GMOs.

Fitts: Sofia Smallstorm discussed this a fair amount. She has also discussed the fact that if you look at the research on storing data on DNA, there is an argument to be made that the operating systems in these injections are setting us up to be bitcoin miners and energy producers. We can produce energy and we can mine bitcoins; we are a walking database.

Here is what is interesting: At MK Ultra, they once used children as databases. So, this is not new.

Farrell: It's not at all.

Fitts: This is a centuries-old technology.

I want to ask you a bit about cloning. We know that cloning is going on. It is certainly occurring with sheep. How long do you think cloning has been happening with human beings? Do you have any idea?

Farrell: I suspect for at least 20-30 years, and I suspect that its centers are in Asia – China, Korea, and possibly to a lesser extent, India. The reason is that the philosophical and cultural foundations of those societies are very different than ours. They are not so prohibited by their culture from doing those types of things. It's because of the view of human nature itself as being nothing but an accident or an evil creation of the demi-urge or what have you. But they don't have the same view of human nature that is indigenous to this culture.

This is another reason I think you have to be very, very cautious about transhumanism. Something that Dr. de Hart and I tried to bring out in our book about transhumanism is that if you 'dig and scratch' long enough, you will find an old alchemical agenda in it. In alchemical thinking, mankind has four degrees of descent from the ideal human being. The ideal human being is, believe it or not, this strange thing that we discovered of a masculine androgyne. In other words, you can even look at the current effort to entitle transgender and this type of thinking to drive that agenda into society.

Incidentally, most transgender people who I know are not on board with that agenda. They know what the game is.

If you look at the descent, you have andro giant, and the next level down is mineral man, then vegetable man, and animal man, which is us. So, if you look at what the transhumanists are doing: They are trying to climb back up that alchemical ladder to create mineral man, the wedding of information technology and robotic technology directly with the human being, or biodigital convergence, as the Canadian government is now calling it.

If you look at some of the experiments that are being conducted in Asia where they are mixing and mingling human genes with animal genes, like putting human brain cells into mice and all of these bizarre, weird things – as in the time of Noah and the coming of the Son of Man type of agenda that you see happening – they are climbing back up that ladder because they think this will give us that perfect androgynous man.

There are many esoteric and occult agendas lurking in the middle of this thing. I know this sounds wild and I know it sounds like a bad Hollywood B movie, but this is exactly what is going on.

Fitts: I ordered a book by a geneticist about the next 500 years. You hear the speech that, “Ultimately, this planet will die, so if we are going to survive as a species, we have to reengineer our minds and bodies to be able to travel and thrive in outer space. Therefore, we have to do these things.”

Farrell: I’ve heard the same argument. In fact, there are articles coming out that have been ‘ticking up’ in the last two to three years about how it’s necessary for us to modify humanity itself in order to be able to sustain a permanent presence in space.

Stop and think about this: This was not part of the thinking during the Apollo era or the Gemini era or the Soyuz era. There was no talk about modifying humanity; we were modifying the space environment for humanity to be able to go into it, not the other way around.

They have managed to flip the discussion on the human presence in space and tie it to the transhumanist agenda. So, on and on this goes. The key component that they are capitalizing on here is fear. “The Earth is going to die any minute now, and we had better modify humanity so that we can go into space and mine asteroids.”

Fitts: “We are here to help you.” It’s the medical portion of the UFO op.

I reviewed a book earlier this year called Irreversible Damage. It’s written by a Wall Street Journal reporter who studied about this since 2016. It’s as if somebody hit a switch, and suddenly, thousands – if not more – of young teenage girls in America want to go transgender.

When you study it, you realize that this is a mind control op. There is no way that this many youths, suddenly ‘out of the blue’ overnight, would all be wanting to do this, and Planned Parenthood would be set up to give them enough testosterone so they could do irreversible physical damage, and do it without their parents’ consent.

The parents are financially responsible for whatever happens, but they don’t even know, and they haven’t given their consent.

If you look at the push by these young people to do surgery and hormonal therapy, it is very clear that they need thousands of people to experiment on. They are trying to figure out if they can change a girl to a boy or a boy to a girl. In the meantime, in the vaccines, they are injecting women’s DNA into men and men’s DNA into women.

Farrell: The health consequences of that alone are going to be drastic over time. I think that we have only begun to see the beginning of these adverse reactions. I think that over the next 5-10 years, we will start seeing some very bizarre things. I could be wrong, but that is my thought.

This transgenderism – to coin a word – that they are pursuing right now is coming straight out of this materialistic philosophy that your body and your sexuality (I don’t like the word ‘gender’ because that is a linguistic expression, not a sexual one) is an accident. It’s not a fundamental component of who you are. This is also a part of their thinking, and this is what allows them to do these ‘bizarre Frankenstein-type’ experiments on little children and adolescents and so on.

“You feel like a boy today? Go change your sex.”

Fitts: If you want humans to have power, they need to be able to engage in very significant risk management. If you study the history of the human race, the most powerful risk management organization ever created is the family. The more a family loves each other, the more they won’t let one go down. The family will pull together. You know you have a group of people who have your back.

One of my favorite quotes from one of my favorite authors, Andrew Vachss, is, “Your family are the people who don’t turn you in.”

Historically, your family was the people who had your back. They’ve tried to change that with mind control, but now they are trying to change it physically so that literally, if you look at Harry Potter and The Gummy Bears, children are being raised to believe that their parents are stupid, old, and they don’t have the magic potions, and on and on. So, you are trying to tear apart the family; you are trying to turn men against women, and turn off -spring against their parents, and parents against the grandparents. It’s just an unbelievable tsunami of divide and conquer programming agendas and tricks. It goes on and on and on.

I think that the hardest thing for most people to understand is that the agenda is intentional, it’s coming top-down, it is very powerful, and it really is that bad.

When COVID-19 started and I tried to warn people about contact tracing, they couldn’t believe what I was saying. It was so ‘out there’.

I was saying, “They are going to kidnap your kids and use them for human ritual and pedophilia.”

Farrell: You have hit on something very, very important, and I want people to latch onto this. When you read the transhumanists like Ray Kurzweil and their publications, you will notice a significant lack of commentary on certain governmental institutions that have been taken for granted throughout most of human history, and they are family and tradition.

There is no talk in Ray Kurzweil’s publication about how all of this wonderful technology and all this wonderful transhumanist agenda is going to impact the family and human society.

Fitts: Family is old; we don’t need family anymore.

Farrell: Precisely. With transhumanism, we are looking at the COVID op writ large because there is no study they can point to on how their agenda will affect human society and humanity over the long term. It is just assumed that everything they are promoting will be beneficial, and everybody is going to love it.

Fitts: I would say is that you have a group who is in control of this, and they are going to experiment on the rest of the population in a state of complete control until it works optimally for them. So, transhumanism is for them – the one percent of the one percent – and everybody else is basically a guinea pig until they evolve and figure this out. Where they end up will be a mess because when your vision of reality excludes 50% of reality, you are bound to ‘f’ it up.

Farrell: You are bound to fail, and this is the other thing that people need to take away from this. Transhumanists are working with a stunted cosmology. I began with the materialism aspect of this for a reason; that is a stunted cosmology. It says nothing to the human spirit. It says nothing to human history. That is the other thing that you will notice about the transhumanists. There is very little mention of history or tradition or culture; it’s all about technology.

I’m sorry, but you cannot have a culture and have a human society being run by nothing but technology.

Fitts: Here is the thing: The power of the human race is when we share intelligence, not just with each other, but with all life and with the divine. That is where the power really gets going. That is where the ‘juice’ and the fun get going. They are trying to capture and control by literally having each person individually resonate with a machine instead of with life.

Farrell: That is so key. The other omission – and I’m stressing these omissions for when people start to read these transhumanists – is to look for the things they don’t talk about. Where does Ray Kurzweil talk about animals and how they have been integrated into human society? Nowhere.

The society they are envisioning is literally a society of machines without trees, without birds, without dogs, without cats or horses and so on. That is what they are trying to create.

It is so stunted a vision that it is bound to fail. This is the one thing that I want people to take away from it: This is such a stunted vision that it is bound to fail. It's anti-human, and no one wants to live like this.

Fitts: The other thing is that it's lost. I don't have another way to describe them other than they are lost. Sometimes I despair of ever trying to explain to them what they don't know. I don't know how to tell them.

Farrell: The other thing that people have to 'latch' onto is that these people cannot be discussed with; you cannot have a discussion with them. You can discuss, and you can make your points, but don't expect to win the argument immediately.

You are planting seeds, and some of those seeds may sprout, and some may not. It's the parable of the sower. You don't have to win the argument; you just have to put out what you think and let those things take fruit in their own time.

Fitts: I was told about a hologram they did in Seattle for New Year's Eve. They had stars around the Seattle Space Needle. Then they brought all of the stars in, and suddenly, they let them out, but now each star was on a leash. How is that for a metaphor?

I wanted to mention virtual reality. Virtual reality is something that I have a little interest in. When Nina Heyn and Ulrike Granögger and I were in Paris in October of 2019 to see the Da Vinci, they had a virtual reality program on the Mona Lisa. That's the last time I tried virtual reality. It always gives me a headache; I hate it, but I'm told by people who really follow it that they are planning on using very heavy virtual reality on the youths for education, and they are going to do everything they can to get children into the machine in a way that they never come back out.

Farrell: I agree; that is the information part of the green technologies. It's an experiment that is doomed to failure because the more that you get into virtual reality, the more disconnected you are from reality. Sooner or later Mother Nature, in some way or fashion, is going to be the rubber band that snaps back, and it will be brutal.

Call me crazy, but I think that their omission of the animal kingdom is going to come back and ‘bite’ them hard.

Fitts: Absolutely; the birds will not sing for them.

Farrell: The birds won’t sing. We’ve seen birds taking cables off of 5G towers. Go birds!

I recently did a story about China where an elephant herd in China got out of its preserve and went on a rampage through several Chinese cities. It was a herd of 15 elephants trampling down the street, feeding off of crops and so on.

I thought, “Here we go. The Banquet at Belbury is happening right now.”

Fitts: I think it’s in the Lord of the Rings when the trees come out and help in the battle.

Farrell: Yes. C.S. Lewis has the same imagery in That Hideous Strength, but I realize that I’m sounding like a complete ‘nut’ here.

Fitts: It doesn’t sound nutty at all.

Farrell: If you understand reality, this is my point. These people don’t understand it. Sooner or later their ‘tinkering’ is going to cross some line.

Fitts: The line was crossed last year.

Farrell: I agree. At some point, don’t be surprised if you see animals doing strange things. I’m telling you right now that it is going to happen.

This is the whole point about transhumanists: When you read them, they are so disconnected. This is what really strikes me about reading Ray Kurzweil’s book. This man is so disconnected from reality that he actually thinks that all of this (1) is a good idea, and (2) it is going to work.

Fitts: I have a much more jaundice view of how this works. I think that people like Ray Kurzweil are encouraged, programmed, and incentivized because the people at the top who are remarkably intelligent and coherent want 'air cover' for what they are going to do. Kurzweil is basically out there marketing. He's like the ad campaign that comes up with the slogan for Proctor & Gamble.

I see all of these people as just being encouraged to market for where they want to go, and their view is much more ruthless than Kurzweil.

Farrell: Yes. To put it bluntly, there is a Nietzschean element to transhumanism that is rather frightening when you compare what the transhumanists are saying and where they want to go. You look at some of the writings of Friedrich Nietzsche, The New Man, and so forth, and if you compare the two, you will be astounded at the parallels. That should give people pause.

When you are dealing with Nietzsche, you are dealing with a man who saw all of this coming. He went insane because of it. Fundamentally, in his tangled writings, he pointed out the ultimate nihilistic basis of it all. This is the other thing that transhumanists are all about.

If you look behind those four technologies – GRIN (Genetics, Robotics, Information, and Nanotechnology) – and you look behind how they want to apply them, each and every application that they are talking about is a fundamental assault on humanity itself. It's a nihilistic agenda.

Fitts: They will find ways of marketing many of these technologies that make them look very attractive. The soldier who was hurt, and this is integrated into his body, can now walk again, whereas he was paralyzed before. Now he can support his family and this and that.

There are all of these marvelous and fantastic applications which are consensual. In other words, the soldier agreed to take the risk to integrate the technology to see if it would work or not, but he gave his consent; it was informed consent.

One of the weirdest things that I had happen about two or three years ago was an altercation with a fellow who I am absolutely convinced was on a Neuralink. I would say something, and-you know how on your computer the little hourglass spins-his eyes would stop, and he would freeze like a computer. It was like he was waiting for his download.

I kept doing things that were unexpected and unpredictable, and he kept freezing and doing this. I thought, “Oh my God! They’ve got him!”

Farrell: I’ve had similar experiences with some people. I suspect the same thing.

This is going to sound very weird, but I want to go back to what I said about this idea of an electro-encephalographic dictionary that goes back to the 1970’s. I think they have some people already integrated and have been running some of these experiments. With the COVID thing, they have decided to take the experiment global.

Fitts: I’ve had experiences – and I don’t know if nanotechnology was involved or if it was just entrainment – where I was working with someone, and gotten fairly close to them in terms of business, and then literally, the next day, they are no longer there; it’s a completely different person.

The only thing that happened was they bought an iPhone. That’s it. They’re not someone who I can work with anymore.

Farrell: If people want to read a book that is very technical, it’s by K. Eric Drexler. This is his doctor’s thesis at MIT. It’s called Nanosystems: Molecular Machinery, Manufacturing, and Computation. Read some of the things in this book. You will immediately get clear that this is all about making each and every human being a part of an ‘operating system’, which I think is the best term for it, and to integrate humanity into a kind of hive where you lose your individual personality and your ability to function in a normal human society. It’s chilling work.

Fitts: I started to read Drexler when it first came out. I was on to him very early on. I was lucky.

Let’s talk about what we can do. I think the first thing that you can do is know that you can’t protect yourself from a technology unless you know that it exists.

So, you can listen or read this, get your books, read them, and check out the commentary on ‘Mind Control Tactics Used on Children and Young People’, and you can understand that this is real. These people have a coercive transhumanism agenda, and they feel free to experiment on you and your children.

It’s not only you and your children; there are many very wealthy people running around our society who think they are very important and very wealthy, and they are taking the injection and getting sick and dying. This is not only for middle- or lower-class people. Many people who thought they were in the club are going to discover that they are not in the club.

Farrell: They are finding out right now with some of the people being ‘thrown under the bus’.

Fitts: The other thing is that we have seen places in this world – and certainly in the United States – that are rejecting this. Texas just passed a law against vaccine passports; they know it’s a ‘treadmill’.

The last time I looked it was 12, but I think now it’s up to 20 states that have passed these things. It is all in the details. Some laws are better than others, and some are like Swiss cheese; they have holes in them.

Those passports generally include PCR tests, but we know that the tests are worthless. Did you see what happened at the PGA?

Farrell: No.

Fitts: Titus and I talked about it, and we will talk about it in Money & Markets.

Jon Rahm was ahead by six strokes in the golf tournament, and the officials said, “Your PCR test came back. You are positive, and you have to drop out.”

He wouldn’t take the vaccination, so they got him. He was going to win.

So, the athlete who didn’t take the vaccination would have won the tournament, so they got rid of him. Look it up. It's an amazing story.

Meanwhile, you have Fauci's emails out there pointing out that the PCR test is meaningless.

Farrell: I would say there are several things that people can do. I'm warning people that part of my commentary here will be of a religious nature. The first thing that they need to do is inform themselves about the technology. Be aware and make your own decisions. I'm not advocating that people make any decision without being informed. That includes with the vaccines.

I have no intention of taking any of them, but I also caution people against the idea of rejecting those who have. What they need is prayer rather than rejection. I do think that we are looking at some long-term effects here that we are just beginning to see.

My other piece of advice for people is that you need to pray for protection from this. Let me give you an example: My prayer for protection goes like this:

To protect me from all evil, from any source, quarter, reason, accident, ailment, affliction, evil spells, spirit or intention person, use of technology, government policy, natural or manmade disaster.

That is exactly what I pray.

Fitts: That is fabulous.

Farrell: You have to learn to be very specific in your prayer. This also includes protection from certain evil individuals by name. There is an old statement by St. Vincent of Lérins: Maxim lex orandi, lex credenda- the law of prayer is the law of belief. If you believe certain things, they should be part of your prayer.

He meant it in a very different context than I'm using, but you need to ward yourself because, believe it or not, it works.

Fitts: It absolutely works. Did I ever tell you about my atheist client and the deer's cry? I told her, "You don't have to believe it; just do it."

I called her back two weeks later, and she said, "Oh my God! This works."

Farrell: It's part of who we are as human beings. I don't care what your own personal philosophy is. My cultural tradition and heritage tell me that human beings were meant for worship.

In other words, there is a spiritual component to humanity that is absolutely part of who we are. To ignore that falls into that materialist philosophy that the transhumanists are pushing.

Fitts: I think part of the challenge that people have is most people I know, their churches have let them down. Not all, but most people's churches have basically failed them and deserted them. It's terribly tragic.

Farrell: It's tragic, but there are two fundamental reasons the churches have failed, and when I say 'church', people have to understand that I mean sacramental, liturgical, ritualistic churches because that is historic Christianity. They have failed because: 1) Those churches were targeted by these people in the 1960's. They were infiltrated and coopted. 2) They have failed because many churches, at least in this country, are 501(c)3 corporations. Let's remember what Lyndon Johnson said when he rammed that through, "I've got the churches. They will behave," or something to that effect. So, there is another reason for it right there.

People have to be aware – particularly for those who are religiously inclined – that their church bodies have been coopted, and this is across the board. It's true of Roman Catholicism, Episcopalianism, Lutheranism, and Orthodoxy. To some degree, all these churches have been compromised.

Fitts: The Pope is telling everyone to go get the vaccination. Think about this: We have the Pope marketing the 'mark of the beast'.

Farrell: He's not only doing that, but he is marketing something he knows good and well has human cells that have come from aborted babies in them. That should tell you right there all that you need to know.

Fitts: Pete Kennedy had a wonderful interview with a doctor who was very familiar with the process. They are birthing live babies and then killing them and using that for the injections.

I think the reason they pushed through the late-term was that they knew they were going to engineer the pandemic, and they just needed more fetal material.

Farrell: I put nothing past these people because, ultimately, being materialists, they are Godless.

Fitts: I quickly want to go over two more questions. One of the things that I feel happened that got this going was the Pizzagate scandal scared them to death. What do you think?

Farrell: How so? I'm not quite following.

Fitts: They realized that if enough people in the general population understood what had really happened with Pizzagate, they could lose control. They were very angry and frustrated and threatened.

Farrell: Viewed that way, I think you are correct. My personal take on that is I suspect it was much of the reason behind this gale of opposition that Trump faced when he got in. One of the first things he started talking about was these human trafficking networks and so on. He had that executive order he came out with in 2016.

Fitts: That's big money.

Last question: This is not just a war on God. One of my colleagues reminded me of this earlier when I was talking with him about this interview. They said, "This is not just a war on God; this is a war on the Christ." Do you believe so?

Farrell: Absolutely it is. Going back to what I was saying about the churches, I had this discussion with my sister who is a very devout Roman Catholic. She asked me what I thought about the Pope. I told her, "He's apostate. By any Christian definition, he's apostate, and by any traditional Roman Catholic definition, he most certainly is."

She said, “What do I do?”

I said, “Jackie, you had baptismal vows given to you when you were received into the Roman Catholic Church, and it is up to you to be faithful to those vows.”

This is what most Christians do not understand: When the hierarchy or the church officials are out of any sort of obedience to correct doctrine, it is up to the individual Christian to distance themselves. They owe no allegiance or obedience to apostate hierarchs or clergy or anything of the sort.

Fitts: Right. Our chain of command goes directly to the top if they step out of line.

Farrell: So, people have to ‘wrap their minds around this’. That will turn the churches around very fast when the money starts disappearing from the collection baskets.

The other thing that I tell people is, “If your church is a 501(c)3, get it out because this has not been working.”

People have to understand that we could add another field of action for the transhumanist, and that has been precisely to coop the churches. You look at the early involvement of the Rockefeller family with the ecumenical movement and all that, and you see clearly the fingerprints of the very same people trying to get into these institutions, take them over, and coop them. It has been a very, very long agenda.

Fitts: Yes, it has. I want to mention that I asked Corey Lynn and one of my attorneys if they would be willing to write another form.

We’ve done these disclosure and consent forms to help people grapple, but I would like to do another form that a parent could take to a school and get the school to affirm that they are not going to try to get the child to consent without the parents’ permission to a whole series of things, not just the injections. It also includes sex education, invasive surveys about private family information, including sexual practices, and a whole series of things that the schools are doing behind the parents' backs that are not okay. It's a way of forcing the school to confirm that they will not do any of those things, and it puts the parents back in control. If the schools don't sign these, then you know that it's time to go.

People are saying to me, "Should I pay $60,000 or $70,000 to send my child to an Ivy League school that is going to require an injection and teach them this and that?" By the time they get out of there, they will be totally mind-controlled, and God knows what they will be like. They may want to turn into an elephant.

I try to say to people, "Look, you cannot afford to invest your time and money in any institution that doesn't give you energy. Most of the schools and most of the universities at this point have very little to teach you."

Farrell: They really don't, and I'm glad you say that because we've been talking about the hard form of transhumanism – the technology aspect – but there are soft forms of it. It's literally the indoctrination they are getting in the 'quackademies', as I've come to call it, that is one of the most egregious examples of this whole agenda in action.

People have to 'wrap their heads around' the fact that those institutions are coopted; they are no longer the Harvard or the Princeton or the Yale or Dartmouth of yesterday. They're not. They are trading on their big name, and that's it.

When Princeton comes out and says, "We no longer need to teach Latin and Greek in the classics department," that should tell you the academic 'nuttery' that is going on in these institutions. Why would you want to waste good money for a bad education? If I'm sending my child to Princeton, and they want to study classics, goodness, yes, I want them to learn Latin and Greek. You can't study classics without Latin and Greek. That goes with the territory. Don't send good money after bad education. Just don't.

Fitts: What I've told the last several parents that asked is, "Create a learning plan for what you need. What do you need to learn? Then sit down and figure out what the fastest, most efficient, most fun, and energizing way to get all that knowledge."

You need to think of it as, “I have a toolkit, and I want to put 20 tools in my kit. How do I do it?”

Invent your own curriculum and invent your own process. If you need a certification, get a certification that you are a master plumber. Put 20 tools in the toolkit, but don't waste your money.

Farrell: Owning the culture means becoming an autodidact. An autodidact is simply a self-taught individual.

Fitts: It's Leonardo da Vinci.

Farrell: It's Leonardo da Vinci and Isaac Newton and Gottfried Leibniz and all these people whose education and smarts came mostly from their own effort.

We have this mentality, particularly in this country, that to be educated means that you go to such-and-such an institution, and somebody tells you what to think. No, it doesn't mean that at all.

The greatest minds in Western history were, to a large extent, mostly autodidacts.

Fitts: That does not include Bill Gates, who dropped out of Harvard after a month.

Farrell: No, that does not include people like him.

Fitts: It just goes to show that it doesn't always work.

Farrell: There was a great education at one time in these academies, but not anymore. The academy is the secular flipside of what has been going on in the churches.

Fitts: I did send you my definition of 'transvaxite'.

Farrell: I don't remember what that was.

Fitts: I'm a transvaxite, which means that I self-identify as being vaccinated, even though I'm not vaccinated.

Vaccination is a spectrum. If you don't respect my self-identity, you are a bigot.

Farrell: I like that.

Fitts: Well, two can play the game, right?

Farrell: Yes, two can play the game. In that case, I self-identify as a transvaxite, too.

Fitts: Has your personality changed a little?

Farrell: Well, yes, I'm still a curmudgeon, though.

Fitts: We have a member of our team who does a ceremony. I'm going to learn more about it because I'm getting questions about it. Basically, she tells all of the nanobots in her body, "You have to leave unless you will serve the Christ."

So supposedly, she gets them all to leave, and then she has a baptism for those who have remained and agreed to serve the Christ.

Farrell: It is going to take people's understanding that this is ultimately a spiritual warfare. You've said many times, and I've said many times that this is a war, and it's been going on for millennia.

Fitts: It's 10,000 years old.

I really recommend everybody get your books. Give me the title again.

Farrell: Let me see if I can find them here.

Fitts: You had one that was also dialogues with Scott.

Farrell: That's a different subject. The transhumanism book is called, Transhumanism: A Grimoire of Alchemical Agendas. That's available on Amazon or Barnes & Noble.

Fitts: Don't get it on Amazon because it might come with nanodust.

Farrell: That's true. Get it from Barnes & Noble. The other one is Microcosm & Medium.

Fitts: That one is absolutely fantastic! I've read them both, and they are both good, but this one is fantastic.

Farrell: This one is available on Lulu. It is about the mind manipulation technologies. Those are the two books, and the transhumanism book goes into these grim technologies, citing Kurzweil and another transhumanist author by the name of Joel Garreau. The transhumanist agenda is basically laid out there.

Fitts: I would say that in your vidchats and other discussions with the members' group, transhumanism is coming up regularly.

Farrell: It absolutely does in one form or fashion. I have a very diverse group of people in those vidchats. We have Buddhists, transgenders, atheists, and almost all that broad group of people are seeing the same thing.

Fitts: The interesting thing is that they all believe in freedom and human liberty. That is what is so beautiful about them. You get this really rich discussion.

This is such a gruesome topic. It's hard for me to maintain my state of amusement, but when I'm with you I can always do it.

Farrell: The fundamental thing to realize about these people is that they have no sense of humor. It's the old poem by John Donne, "The devil is a proud spirit; it cannot bear to be mocked."

The best thing to do with these people is look at their absolute 'nuttery' and take it seriously because they are serious about it, but also laugh at it because it's so stupid.

Fitts: I think one of the terrible things about this secrecy and the hidden system of finance is that it has allowed us to get so far apart from each other that we haven't had the benefit; we haven't had the benefit of their abilities with technology, and they haven't had the benefit of getting regrounded by Kansas.

Farrell: In South Dakota we say to the people flying over, "Just keep flying over. Don't stop here."

Fitts: My most wonderful time in South Dakota was when I was driving through and wanted to stop and see Mt. Rushmore. It was starting to snow. I went up to Mt. Rushmore on a Saturday or a Sunday, and I was the only tourist. The whole staff was there, and they had to stay open. It was this beautiful snowfall, and the mountain – the cliff with the sculpture – was just breathtaking. I had this entire staff helping me enjoy the whole thing. It was magical.

Farrell: Mt. Rushmore is a very interesting place. The thing that I like about Mt. Rushmore is not the mountain itself, but when you turn to go out and see how high you are, and you look out over the plains for miles and miles. It is a beautiful sight.

Fitts: They produce some very good people in South Dakota.

Farrell: It's going to be interesting to see. I was dumbfounded when I looked at the population of my hometown, Sioux Falls, which has grown by 67,000 people in the last 20 years. It has just exploded. I knew the city would grow when I was a child when they put the interstates through, but I can't imagine that many people in Sioux Falls.

With all of the people moving to South Dakota, my worry is this: Is South Dakota going to be the same old South Dakota that I knew as a child when Senator Mundt was my senior senator?

Fitts: That is another thing to pray for.

I'm will be talking to you on June 26th to do News Trends & Stories. I have to tell you that we have plenty to talk about.

Farrell: I know we do.

Fitts: We are going to have fun. We will keep this tight, but it's going to be fun.

Farrell: I noticed that you put the UFO disclosure story in there.

Fitts: I think they are trying to globalize the military. I'll be blunt. "Oh, the UFOs. We need to have a global response."

Farrell: And they have already come out with a plea for more money.

Fitts: They have $96 trillion of undocumented adjustments, so let's give them more.

Farrell: And we're open about it now. Isn't that great? "See, we are being transparent."

Fitts: Joseph, have a wonderful day. Goodbye.

Farrell: Goodbye.
